

Diana Leigh Matthews has been researching her family history for over 20 years.

She's taught genealogy courses for Greenville Tech and spoken for the SC Jaycee's. She has also headed her family reunion for more than a decade.

In addition to being a genealogist, Leigh is a motivational speaker and freelance writer. She has even been working on bringing some of her ancestor's to life by writing their story.

Leigh is a very thorough researcher. She will provide you with a list of the resources she searches for you and what she finds in each record.

Have you ever wondered what country your great-grandmother came from or what your great-great grandfather did for a living? Did you want to know if you had any ancestors in the Revolutionary War or Civil War? Why did your ancestors immigrate from their home country?

Leigh can help you answer these questions and many more. She has a variety of resources that are beneficial to your research to draw from. She strives to find the answers to your questions and more.

Leigh is a thorough researcher with decades of experience. She will find otherwise overlooked details to add to your family history. She is also available to travel to photograph homes, businesses, churches or cemeteries to make the past alive for her clients.

Leigh is a professional and conducts herself in such a manner. Her research is documented, informative and easy to understand.
